LETTER FROM OUR TOWN COUNCIL PRESIDENT

Highland community comes together as restrictions continue in Lake County

As we begin May, the Town of Highland — like every other city and town in Indiana — has been given direction by Gov. Eric Holcomb on how to proceed to ease the restrictions we have been living under for the last six weeks. Because Lake, Marion and Cass counties experienced a spike in COVID-19 cases in late April, the state has issued a timeline for us that is a week behind the other 89 counties.

We are not out of the woods on this virus. Highland began May with nearly 50 reported cases, a smaller number than those reported in most of our surrounding communities, but of concern to local and state health authorities, nonetheless.

Over the next week, the leadership team that has been making decisions on how best to keep residents safe will be focusing daily briefings on the best — and safest way — to reopen our playgrounds, Lincoln Community Center and the rest of Town of Highland buildings. We will discuss additional safeguards that will be in place as we reopen.

We appreciate everyone who has been a good neighbor —

[ MAY UPDATE ]

Gov. Eric Holcomb’s Back On Track Indiana plan to safely open the economy will be rolled out in stages:

MAY 8: Indoor church services resume. Those 65 and older and those at elevated risk will be asked to stay home.

MAY 11: Lake County restaurants, retailers and other commercial businesses can reopen. Essential travel restrictions will be lifted, and social gatherings of up to 25 people will be permitted following the CDC’s social distancing guidelines. Hoosiers 65 and over and those with high-risk health conditions should remain at home.

MAY 18: Barber shops, hair/nail salons, spas and other personal services can reopen.

WHAT'S NEXT?

If health indicators remain positive, the state will move to stage 3. To learn more about the different stages and dates, visit BackOnTrack.in.gov.
Matching grant helps Highland tackle $2 million in road improvements

Highland is approved for $2 million in local road projects this summer. The best news: half of the money — $1 million — is coming from the state’s Community Crossings Matching Grant program.

Started in 2016 to assist cities, towns and even counties tackle their lengthy to-do lists by providing a dollar-for-dollar match, Public Works Director John Bach said the project has been a boon for Highland.

“The Town Council saw the value in this program and set aside funds to participate,” Bach said. “Through nearly $500,000 in local match in 2016 and again in 2017 and nearly $900,000 in 2019, we have been able to see real progress in road projects.

“This year’s investment of $1 million, which translates into $2 million in projects, means 31 local streets will get the improvements they need.

“We are already looking at how much Highland will be able to afford as a match for next year.” Bach said.

Town to draft 5-year capital improvement plan

While the snow was still flying, the Town Council began the process of creating a 5-year capital plan as a tool for maximizing every dollar.

It was Councilman Roger Sheeman who broached the idea with the town council at the same time Parks and Recreation began working on a multi-year plan of its own.

Clerk-Treasurer Michael Griffin said the five-year window provides a snapshot of purchases that will be necessary along with plans on how to fund them.

“This is something I’ve long advocated for,” Griffin said. “Not only is it considered a best practice, looking five years out for capital projects will help optimize our resources.”
[ LITTLE FOOD PANTRY ]

The Peterson’s Little Free Library at the bike path and 41st Street has become a hub of activity — not for those looking for a great read — but for folks needing a little extra help with food as well as those helping with donations. Heather Peterson said it’s going to stay that way until the danger of the pandemic passes. “We were cleaning the books on a regular basis but it just wasn’t enough,” she said. “The food is a perfect use for the library at a time when it is most needed.”

[ BLESSING BOX ]

Damaged by a spring storm, the Blessing Box at First Presbyterian Church at Main Square is back up and providing nutrition for those who need it. The church is also providing drive-up free lunches on Delaware between noon and 1 p.m. on Saturdays and will continue to do so for the foreseeable future. Program Coordinator Krissy LaFlech said the church has been blessed with donations that will keep the Blessing Box stocked and lunches packed at least through June.

[ VIRTUAL EXERCISE CLASSES ]

Regulars at Lincoln Community Center fitness classes may be staying home, but plan to emerge from the quarantine even more fit than before, thanks to instructor Louise Boyd. In all, Boyd leads as many as eight classes per week from her very own private YouTube Channel. They include chair yoga and fitness, senior dance and aerobics along with adult aerobics. Renew Active and SilverSneakers members can tap into the classes for free. Others can sign up for pay-as-you-go through Lincoln Community Center.

INFO: Are you Renew Active or SilverSneakers eligible, but not a Lincoln Center member? Call (219) 838-0114 to set up a membership over the phone.

[ PARKS & REC FACEBOOK CONTESTS ]

From lip sync to coloring contests and beyond, Parks and Recreation is working to make sheltering in place more fun. The activities, which began in March and will continue throughout the duration of the state’s stay-at-home orders, are challenging, fun and competitive, just the ticket when it comes to brightening snowy, and now wet, spring days. “We will be coming up with new contests — at least one a week — as long as Lincoln Center remains closed,” Recreation Director Dave Byers said. “We know these are challenging times for kids and we want to make sure they aren’t bored. We are just as eager to have things open and moving again.”
